Wayne Campbell is the president and founder of Tyler's Light, a grassroots non-profit organization bringing awareness to communities across the Midwest about the dangers of prescription and illegal drug use. Wayne has pioneered the effort to reach students and communities through cutting-edge presentations. He has, of this date, spoken to over 200,000 students at 400 schools in 12 states. The organization was named after Wayne's son, Tyler, who tragically died of an accidental drug overdose in July 2011 after a fight with addiction to prescription pain medication. Tyler's Light has made great strides toward encouraging people to "Speak Up, Save a Life". Additionally, Wayne has appeared on CBS 60 Minutes, HBO Real Sports, The Big Ten Network and Direct TV.
